KNOWLEDGE

A core component of AALL's mission is to support the career development and continuing education needs of its members. Members participate in monthly continuing professional education webinars with topics that cover negotiation skills, staffing the library for success, global legal research, competitive intelligence, library budgeting, and more. Articles in the Association's monthly magazine, *AALL Spectrum, cover such issues as new legal research applications for smartphones, how to create great library training sessions, cost-recovery for law library departments, tips for creating successful social media strategies, and how to make library statistics work for you—not against you. Additionally, AALL2go, the Association's online learning center, provides downloadable recorded continuing education programs, available 24/7 from your desktop.

COMMUNITY

Membership in AALL allows you to connect with your colleagues across the nation. By joining special interest sections, serving on committees, and attending the Annual Meeting and Conference, you can meet new people, build relationships, and share ideas and skills. Members are connected through the AALL Membership Directory, the online member search, and numerous discussion lists. And AALL Spectrum and Law Library Journal keep law librarians in touch with what's going on in the profession with insightful articles by knowledgeable experts.

SUPPORT

AALL provides powerful leadership and advocacy on behalf of the law library community. AALL gives law library professionals a unified, strong voice and makes sure that legislators, vendors, and institutions value and respect law librarians. The AALL Government Relations Office, located in Washington, D.C., addresses your national information policy concerns. The Government Relations Committee monitors state legal developments and provides training for effective grassroots advocacy. The Committee on Relations with Information Vendors communicates and negotiates with publishers on consumer issues. Member volunteer leaders are responsive to your needs, sensitive to your issues, and dedicated to finding solutions for your concerns.
