Disaster Preparedness

April in Wisconsin... the start of baseball, warmer weather, blooming flowers, and... Tornado Awareness Month. Many of us will never witness the full wrath of a fire, flood, or tornado disrupting our libraries but – are we prepared for the possibility? Do we have policies and procedures in place for our libraries? And, because colleagues in our organizations look to their librarians for information on just about everything, are we equally prepared - if and when disaster strikes – with information to answer questions relating to data security, keeping vital and archival records safe, and generally helping to “keep calm and carry on?”

Barbara Fritschel, librarian at the 7th Circuit Court of Appeals Branch Library in Milwaukee, has weathered both Hurricanes Katrina and Rita, and she’s also dealt with such mundane yet mortal-to-a-library enemies as leaky pipes. She’ll speak to three basic concepts related to disaster preparedness: helping others when disaster strikes them; what to do when it strikes you; and steps to take before something bad happens.
