

An Index to Special Court Sessions in West's Federal Reporters*

Barbara L. Fritschel

Recognizing their value for researchers interested in information about federal court judges, Ms. Fritschel provides an index to over six hundred special court sessions found in West's Supreme Court Reporter, Federal Reporter, and Federal Supplement. She also includes information on oral histories relating to federal courts and judges from the Directory of Oral History Interviews.

¶1 Finding biographical information for federal judges no longer on the bench can be difficult, especially if there is no published biography. Fortunately, the Federal Judicial Center provides numerous resources relating to Article III judges. In addition, many federal courts hold special sessions honoring significant judicial milestones. These sessions are included in various reporters published by West Group (formerly West Publishing Company) and provide not only a source of basic biographical information, but also insight into a judge's personality and character. This article briefly reviews Federal Judicial Center materials, but its major component is an index to the special court sessions published in the West reporters.

Resources of the Federal Judicial Center

¶2 On February 9, 2000, the Federal Judicial Center launched the History of the Federal Judiciary Web site.¹ This site contains the Federal Judge's Biographical Database, a comprehensive listing of biographical information for over 2,500 past and current Article III judges.² Each judge's biography contained in the database includes the date of birth, death, or both; place of birth, death, or both; period of federal judicial service; education; professional career; race or ethnicity; and gender.

¶3 In addition to this basic information, an individual judge's biography also includes a link to the Federal Judicial Center's directory of manuscript collections related to federal judges when an entry exists in that directory for the judge.³ The entry describes each of the judge's manuscript collections and any other collections containing papers of the judge, and provides information about the locations of the collections and their access policies.

¶14 The biographical database remains a work in progress. The biographical information for judges serving in special courts, such as the Customs Court or Court of International Trade, is found only under their particular court, available in a separate section of the Federal Judicial Center's Web site⁴ but not in the combined judges section of the biographical database. The plan is to eventually move all life tenured judges over to the judges section. Also, this site does not include information from the Federal Judicial Center's publication, A Directory of Oral History Interviews,⁵ which contains over 170 oral history interviews conducted with federal judges. This resource includes contact information, the length of the interview, and whether transcripts are available for purchase or interlibrary loan. Again, plans have been made to incorporate this information into the site at a future date, as well as adding new oral histories.⁶

Special Court Sessions

¶15 Special sessions of federal courts are occasionally held to honor a judge. There are several types of these sessions, including presentations of portraits, memorials, tributes, investitures, retirements, and presentation of the Devitt Distinguished Service to Justice Award. Documentation about the sessions is often published in the various West reporters covering decisions rendered by Article III judges. The information provided about the sessions varies greatly, ranging from short resolutions to speeches that are several pages long. Often a photo is included, something lacking from other resources. Comments from colleagues, law clerks, and attorneys provide a perspective that basic biographical information cannot match.

¶16 Because of the importance of special court sessions as a source of otherwise unavailable and often very insightful biographical information for federal judges, this article provides an index, arranged alphabetically by judge's name, to the special court sessions found in West's Supreme Court Reporter, Federal Reporter, and Federal Supplement. Since the oral history interviews listed in the Directory of Oral History Interviews are not yet linked in the History of the Federal Judiciary Web site, references to them are also included in this index.

Using the Index to Special Court Sessions

¶7 The basic entry for each judge consists of:

- name
- birth and death dates
- courts served and dates of service
- citation
- type of special session
- number of pages and availability of photographs
- indication of whether the judge is listed in the Directory of Oral History Interviews.

¶8 The notation “prefatory material” is provided in the citations listed for some earlier volumes of the Federal Reporter and Federal Supplement. Use of this notation indicates that the information is at the front of the book, before the table of contents. Material placed in this location was paginated with arabic numerals. This notation is needed to warn the user that the pages cited should be distinguished from the reported court opinions which also use the same arabic numerals but appear later in the volume. In the later volumes of these reporters, special sessions were given roman numerals, eliminating any possible confusion. Some entries in the index have citations to both the arabic and roman numerals. This is used when special sessions material that was originally printed as prefatory material with arabic pagination was changed to roman pagination in later reprinting of the volume. The volume numbers remain the same. In the Supreme Court Reporter, all of the special sessions are listed in the prefatory material.

¶9 Entries also include notations as to whether the session honored more than one judge. The page numbers provided in the citation reflect the total number of pages for the session. No effort was made to separate the pages by judge when more than one was honored. Also noted are those situations when there are relatively few pages of text. This usually occurs when several portraits are being presented at the same time.

¶10 Entries also indicate when the Devitt Distinguished Service to Justice Award is presented to a judge. Named for Judge Edward J. Devitt, former chief judge of the United States District Court for Minnesota, the award is given to a judge for exemplary service to the federal judiciary. Started in 1982 by the West Publishing Company and currently administered by the American Judicature Society, the selection committee for the award is composed of three individuals—a Supreme Court justice and a judge of the court of appeals and the district court. Included in the proceedings which are published in the West reporters is a short vitae of each committee member, which does not vary much from reporter to reporter. When a person has served on the selection committee on several occasions, it is not necessary to view every such entry.

¶11 Every effort was made to include all relevant dates for every entry. In the few cases a date could not be found, the notation “n.d.” (no date) is used.

¶12 This index is current through volume 117B of the Supreme Court Reporter, volume 212 of the Federal Reporter, Third Series, and volume 100 of the Federal Supplement, Second Series. Dates of service and birth and death dates are current through September 25, 2000. As of September 25, 2000, these special court sessions were not available through Westlaw.
